Is it necessary to have a car charger?

Car owners will also find that the car comes with a USB interface, but also can charge the phone. However, most car USB interfaces are designed for data transmission. The current is only 500mA, and the charging efficiency is very low. If you use mobile navigation, the charge is not even enough for navigation. Taking our mobile phone and tablet as an example, the mobile phone is commonly used to charge its specifications at 5V/1A, and the flat panel charger has a specification of 5V/2A. So to achieve faster charging efficiency, a USB car charger with 1A or more output current is the best choice!

The current car charger design is in the position of the cigarette lighter, many manufacturers introduced a multi-functional car charger: multi-USB interface, even the car charger also comes with a cigarette lighter function. This versatile car charger not only does not affect the function of the car itself, but also expands more functions so that charging, cigarette lighter, and data transmission do not affect each other, which greatly facilitates the use of the car.
